July 2015

Methodology

This national poll of 800 likely general election voters was conducted on July 22nd & 23rd, 2015.

Interview selection was random within predetermined election units. Seventy percent (n = 560) of the interviews were conducted via landline telephone by professional interviewers. Thirty percent (n=240) of the interviews were conducted on cell-phones. These samples were then combined and structured to correlate with actual voter turnout in a nationwide general election.

This poll of 800 likely general election voters has an accuracy of +/- 3.5% at a 95% confidence interval. Some message testing questions were split sampled into two groups of 400 voters and have an accuracy of +/- 4.9% at a 95% confidence interval.

Presentation Outline

- I. Unaided Public Opinion is Trending Against the Iran Deal and will continue to do so as the facts get out.
- II. Many facts and arguments work very well to increase opposition to the agreement.
- III. The strong majority of voters want their Senators and Congressman to override a Presidential veto so Congress can disapprove of the deal.

Major Findings

- I. Unaided Public Opinion is Trending Against the Iran Deal. As voters become more educated on the details of the deal opposition grows from a plurality of 45% to a majority of 65%.
 - The plurality of voters, 45%, want their Senators and Congressman to vote No on the deal. This is a net 8% increase in opposition from June. Only 29% would vote yes, 27% are not sure.
 - Those who are not sure are more likely to be Democrats or Independents; moderates; under 55 years old; and women.
 - When given a choice between the arguments of President Obama for the deal and his opponents, the majority agrees with the opponents, 54% - 31%.
 - The majority, 56%, believes there's a better way to demand Iran dismantle its nuclear program, have any time/any where inspections and sanctions removed in phases; while only 30% agree there is no alternative but war.
 - The majority of voters, 54%, say the U.S. is less secure due to President Obama's policies, only 33% say more secure.
 - The plurality of voters, 48%, say the agreement brings Iran closer to obtaining nuclear weapons, only 34% disagree.
 - Six in ten voters, 61%, do not believe President Obama when he says the agreement is the only way possible to eventually stop Iran. Only 31% believe this argument.

Major Findings

- I. Unaided Public Opinion is Trending Against the Iran Deal. As voters become more educated on the details of the deal opposition grows from a plurality of 45% to a majority of 65%. (CONT.)
 - The majority, 50%, disagrees that we don't need to trust Iran to honor a nuclear agreement because of the negotiated inspections, 39% agree.
 - Almost two-thirds, 62%, disagree that the deal makes America safer and more secure, only 32% agree.
 - Almost two-thirds, 63%, disagree that the deal prevents developing a nuclear weapon, only 29% agree.

All things being equal with which position do you agree with more?

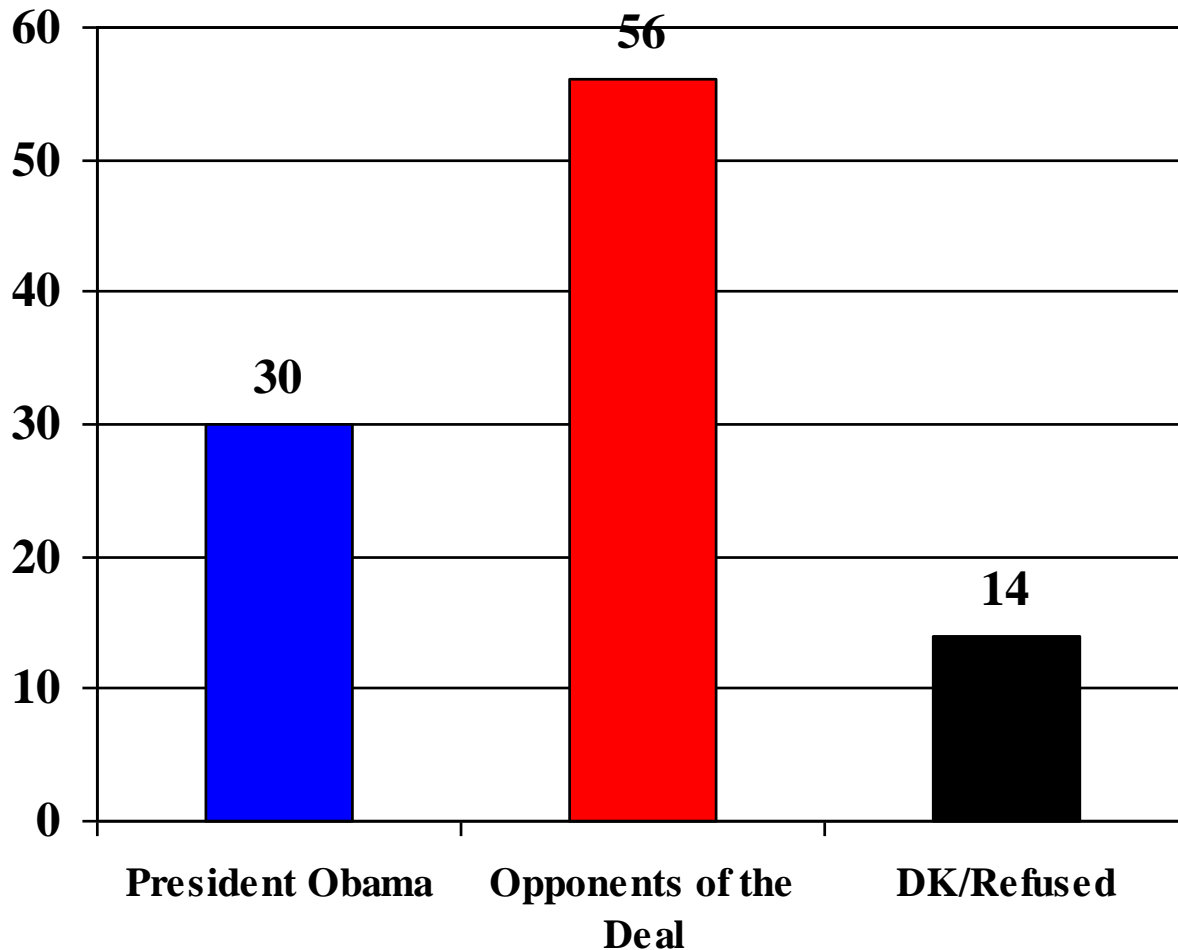

President Obama who says that the proposed deal with Iran on nuclear weapons is a good deal. It has unprecedented verification and unprecedented access to Iran's nuclear sites. It limits Iran's nuclear program and extends their breakout time to develop a nuclear weapon to one year.

The opponents of the deal who say that it's a bad deal because it gives Iran a $150 billion windfall in immediate sanctions relief, ends their arms embargo and it leaves Iran's nuclear infrastructure intact. The agreement is similar to the one North Korea violated to build nuclear weapons. Iran can continue to support wars of aggression against their neighbors and terrorism against Israel and the United States.

President Obama, Secretary Kerry and their supporters say that the opponents of this agreement offer no policy alternatives other than military action and offer no other course than war. Those who oppose the President say there is a better way, including President Obama's original demand that Iran dismantle its nuclear weapons infrastructure, that there could be any time/ anywhere inspections, that there should be no signing bonus for Iran and that sanctions will be removed in phases if Iran continues to keep its promises. Which do you think is correct?

Major Findings

- II. Many facts and arguments work to increase opposition to the agreement. Up to 4 in 5 voters have problems with specific issues and 2 in 3 voters could be opposed to the agreement.
- Four in five voters, 80%, oppose giving Iran $150 billion in sanction relief in the next few weeks and months without Congressional approval.
 - Three in four voters, 77%, agree that if we don't stop Iran now they will eventually get nuclear weapons and our children will likely face nuclear war. Only 17% disagreed.
 - Three in four voters, 75%, believe that if Iran gets nuclear weapons they would use them to attack Israel. Only 15% said no.
 - Seven in ten voters, 72%, said that Congress should NOT approve a deal that does not allow independent U.S. inspections of Iran's military laboratories. Only 18% said yes.
 - Seven in ten voters, 69%, believe that Iran would arm terrorists to use nuclear weapons to attack the U.S. Only 20% said no.
 - Two in three voters, 68%, do NOT believe that U.N. inspections with a 24 day notification period before, will stop Iran from cheating. Only 23% said yes.
 - Two in three voters, 65%, think this deal will have other nations follow through on their threat to attain nuclear weapons to protect themselves from Iran. Only 22% said that it stops the spread of nuclear weapons.
 - The majority, 54%, said the Iranian Defense Minister's statement to not allow inspectors to enter military sites demonstrates their true intentions; only 24% disagreed.

- Ending the arms embargo with $150 billion in sanctions relief, Iran becoming an instant threshold nuclear power, secret side agreements, leaving the nuclear infrastructure intact, no way to restore sanctions, and Iran's terror sponsorship appear to be the best arguments to move voters to opposition.

This deal will end the U.S. arms embargo on Iran and will free Iran to import conventional weapons like tanks, combat aircraft and missile launchers that have long been denied to them, and thanks to the lifting of sanctions they will now have $150 billion more dollars to buy them with.	22/72	47/40	10/89	9/83	11/86	10/87	33/59	18/72

The United States has conceded many of its original positions to dismantle Iran's nuclear program, right to enrich uranium, keep heavy water reactors, keep the military dimensions, and when the deal ends Iran will be able to develop nuclear weapons within a year, if not months. III. The Strong Majority wants Congress to Override.

- Six in ten voters, 61%, want their Senators and Congressman to override. Only 28% would sustain.
- The majority, 51%, says President Obama is trying to undermine the American people by going to the U.N. first. Only 42% say no.
- The majority, 54%, agrees that the President's decision to put the U.N. first above Congress is a dangerous precedent. Only 36% disagree.
- Three in five voters, 58%, regardless of party or opinion of the agreement would want the deal voted down to restore the primacy of the American system of government.

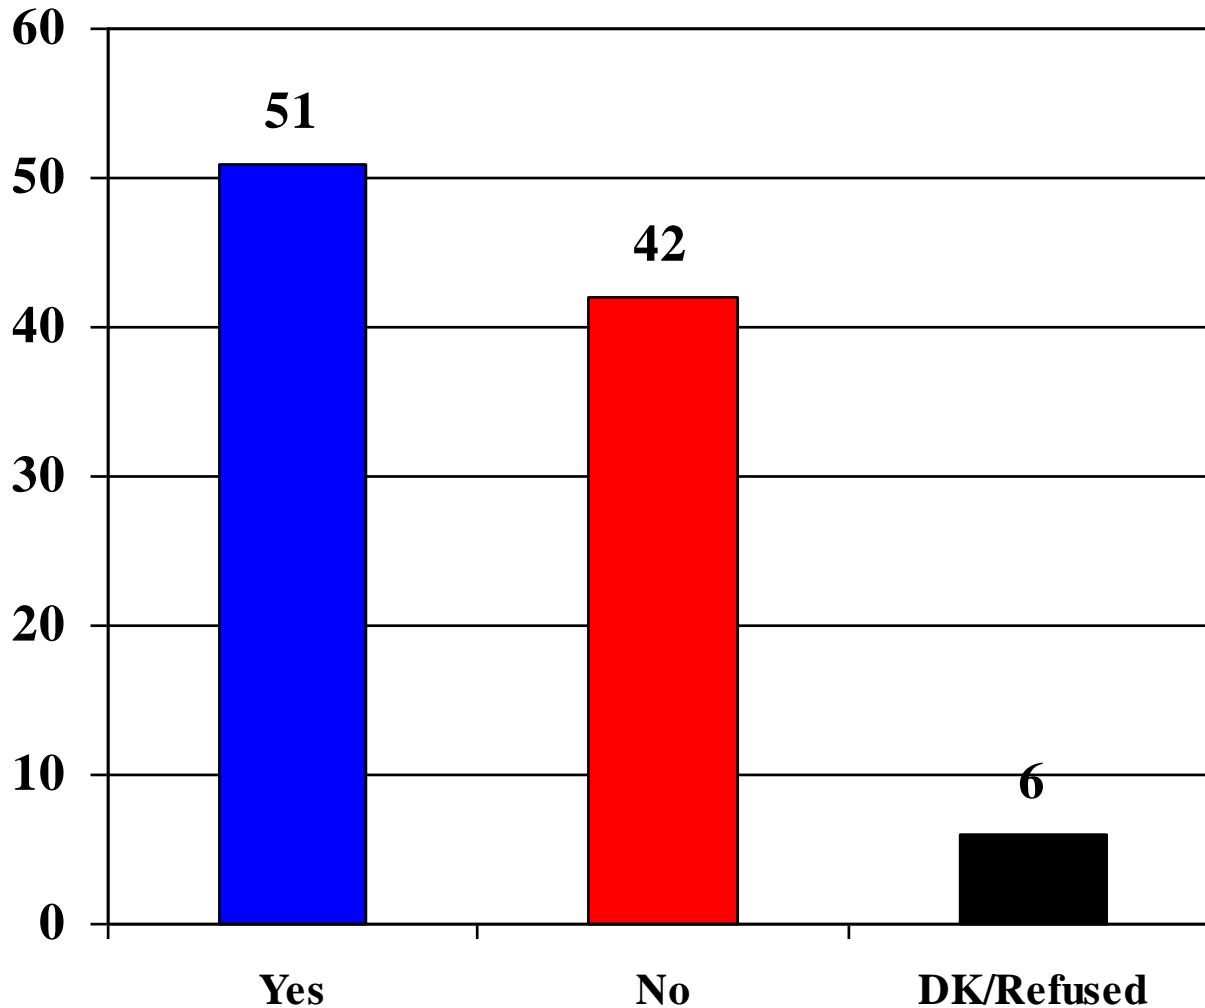

Congress has a right to vote to approve or disapprove any deal that President Obama concludes with Iran. If the majority of Congress were to disapprove the President's deal with Iran, the President could then veto Congress' disapproval and proceed with his deal with Iran. In that case, would you want to see your Senators and Congressman vote to override the President's veto or sustain the President's veto?
